Dear Sir/-

In reply to yours of the 1-7-18, would say that if Pte. Ernest Simms was confined in civilian clothes, it was the clothes he had with him when he enlisted. All personal effects are handed over to undertaker, who usually places them in parcel in box that contains coffin, so that they may be secured by the relatives.

Regarding $5.00 gold piece you speak of, I know nothing about it, but feel assured that if same were on his person when he died it would have been passed over to Orderly Room, where I would have trace of it.

A watch and chain belonging to deceased has been sent to Captain Howley, Officer i/c Records, for transmission to his next of kin.

I have the honour to be,

Dear Sir,

Mr. John Simms who lost his son Ernest, a volunteer, of Pneumonia, would be glad to know if he was dressed in the clothes he wore away from home when he was put in his coffin and if anyone knows anything about his purse.

In addition to the money in his purse his father says he had a $5 gold piece which he thinks he had secured in a pocket in his shirt.

Any information that you can give regarding the above will be gratefully received by the parents of the deceased,
Yours truly, V.R. Courage
